

SCIENCE DIALOGUE FY2020

WELCOME JSPS POSTDOCTS!

YOUNG INTERNATIONAL
RESEARCHERS
INTRODUCE JAPANESE
STUDENTS TO THE REALM OF SCIENCE

What's the Science Dialogue?

The program offers JSPS Overseas Fellows the unique opportunities to volunteer to give lectures in English on their research work at high schools in the vicinity of their host institutes. The aim of the lectures is to stimulate the young students' interest in research and deepen their understanding of science from a global point of view through interacting with overseas fellows. As for the fellows, the participation in the program will be an enjoyable opportunity to communicate with the local community and strengthen their ties with Japan.

Researcher from China

I think this program gave me a good opportunity to learn more about the senior school education system of Japan. Discussing with young students was also an amazing experience and their flurried imagination impressed me a lot. I wish my report could stimulate the enthusiasm of students in seeking future study in university. With this event, I have started to consider how to combine my own scientific work with practical applications and discover new research topics from such effort. Moreover, this experience helps me think how to express the research work in more simple way and improve the readability of research reports.

How to go about participating in the Program?

- JSPS issues a continuous call for applications from JSPS fellows.
- Please be sure to read the Guidelines on our website before application.

Communication

JSPS provides the teacher in charge of the program at the participating school with the JSPS fellow's contact information. The teacher contacts the fellow to draw up a plan together for the content of the lecture session.

Travel

For the fellow and the accompanying person, the cost of travel to the school from the host institution will be covered by JSPS in accordance with its regulations.
