SCIENCE FY2022 DIALOGUE

YOUNG INTERNATIONAL
RESEARCHERS
INTRODUCE JAPANESE
STUDENTS TO THE REALM OF SCIENCE

What's the Science Dialogue?

The program offers JSPS Overseas Fellows the unique opportunities to volunteer to give lectures in English on their research work at high schools in the vicinity of their host institutes.

The aim of the lectures is to stimulate the young students' interest in research and deepen their understanding of science from a global point of view through interacting with overseas fellows. As for the fellows, the participation in the program will be an enjoyable opportunity to communicate with the local community and strengthen their ties with Japan.

Comment from a Ghanaian Researcher

The students were well organized and composed throughout the lecture. They asked the relevant questions and thus indicated they could understand the contents of the lecture.

The students gained the knowledge about the Country Ghana and how it has changed in certain key aspects. Such information is rarely available through the media or even in a regular class.

They also obtained some basic insight into the concept of allopathy and how it can be explored in agriculture. I got the opportunity to share certain aspects of my research with the students and they asked the questions relating to my research and future perspective.

I consider that this is meaningful concerning my fellowship activities.

How to participate in the program?

JSPS issues a continuous call for applications from JSPS fellows. Please be sure to read the Guidelines on our website before application.
