だいご しょう 第5章

日本学術振興会

古来よりにを象徴するものとして知られている「長鳴鳥」は、古事記において、知恵を可じる神が天の石屋戸を開くため、常世(木死)の長鳴鳥を集めて鳴かせたと記されています。

The naganakidori, a long-crowing rooster of the eternal world, has symbolized the dawn since ancient times. Japan's oldest historical record, the Kojiki, relates that the gods gathered naganakidori to signal the end of night and thereby convince the sun goddess Amaterasu to open the stone door of her cave.

5-1 Japan Society for the Promotion of Science

Since the Japan Society for the Promotion of Science (JSPS) was established with an imperial endowment in 1932, it has been Japan's premier funder of scientific research. JSPS has five missions: (1) Create Knowledge in Diverse and Profound Fields; (2) Foster Next Generation of Researchers who Challenge the Creation of New Genres of Knowledge; (3) Strengths of Research Bases in Universities; (4) Strengths of International Research Network; and (5) Strengths of Support Base for Science-Promotion. Based on these missions, JSPS promotes academic research through the Grants-in-Aid for Scientific Research (KAKENHI) program—which is the largest competitive research funds program in Japan-and other subsidies; the Research Fellowship for Young Researchers program and other researcher development programs; international exchange related to academic research; and support for university reform and globalization. All fields of research from basic to applied are eligible for support, from the humanities to the social sciences and natural sciences. The special characteristic of JSPS is that it emphasizes bottom-up support for the researcher's creative ideas.

The JSPS Tokyo Headquarters, located in the Kojimachi district of Tokyo's Chiyoda Ward, has one headquarter, six departments and three centers-Policy Planning Department, Administration Department, Headquarters for International Affairs, International Policy Planning Department, International Program Department, Human Resource Development Program Department, Research Program Department, Research Center for Science Systems, Center for Science Information Analysis, and Center for Promotion of World Premier International Research Center Initiative—with a total of 177 full-time employees (as of April 1, 2023). In addition to its headquarters in Tokyo, JSPS has ten liaison offices overseas in nine countries. As of 2015, the organization established a new post, JSPS Science Advisor, in São Paulo to collect information on research trends and provide specialized advice in Brazil and neighboring areas. Cooperative ties have been built with 91 overseas counterpart institutions—including two international institutions—in 49 countries/regions around the world to promote various international programs (as of October 2023). JSPS plays a crucial role as the Japan's premier funder of scientific research.

Please refer to the list on page 39 for the JSPS programs. For details on each program, such as the KAKENHI program, the World Premier International Research Center Initiative (WPI), fellowship programs, and outreach programs, please see the JSPS website or brochure.

5-3 Researcher Community Network (Alumni Association)

JSPS supports the formation of researcher communities (alumni associations) of the former program participants so as to help foreign researchers who have come to Japan under a JSPS program to actively maintain and develop their networks with international and Japanese researchers even after the completion of their fellowship tenure. As of October 2023, 20 researcher communities had formally received certification from JSPS, and about 25 percent of former fellows—a total of 31,000 since the fellowship programs were launched—belong to one of them. As JSPS alumni associations, these groups receive support from the JSPS head office and overseas branches, and independently engage in such activities as periodically hosting academic symposia, publishing newsletters and e-mail magazines. Many overseas fellows work hard on alumni association activities to serve as a bridge between Japan and their home countries.
