

Specific Competencies for Graduates

The characteristics that typify KGU's ideal "Global HR with practical competencies" include a well-established foundation made up of self-awareness, determination and moral values, built up with specialized skills and knowledge, and complemented by international communication skills, cultural understanding, leadership and management skills.

Acquired skills and knowledge will be assessed according to specific indices, and while progress assessment will be made by teaching coordinators and students of this project, results of practical activities will be presented to and evaluated by representatives from industries and international organizations.

Constant evaluation of student progress and project feedback will be conducted to improve outcomes.
