Lecture summary (講演概要):

The lecture was delivered in a very lively and comfortable environment. I tried to explain why I selected to be a researcher. Although it was little difficult for me to explain in detail but I tried to manage and elaborated my current research activities, development of vaccines & antimicrobials and expected outcome of my work. I further emphasized the importance of medical science as well as the life sciences research to young students who were very inquisitive and enthusiastic. In the second part of my presentation, I explained about my country Pakistan, its culture, food, people, topography etc. In the last part, I tried to motivate the young students i.e. how to be a good student and how to get involved in daily life activities as well as scientific life. At the end, I advised them to study hard and learn the English language to ease their future life in this global world and current scenario.
