I introduced the UK and my path as a researcher. I discussed liquid crystal science (my former research field) and showed how beautiful liquid crystals are and how they are very useful and found in nature and technology including liquid crystal displays. I then discussed my current research in the field of media technology and virtual reality research. The take-home messages of the lecture were: anyone can begin programming and creating at home; research and science are fun and beautiful and; finding your passion is as important as working hard at school in order to have a successful and enjoyable life and career.
