I presented France, the importance of speaking English in my life, gave some extra arguments on why learning English and some tips on how I did it. I gave some general ideas on how Japan is perceived in France and some cultural differences between our two countries.
Then, I presented what is Physics and why bother studying it. I described my personal journey to Physics and then discussed the life of a researcher – what I like and what I do on a daily basis. I ended up by explaining my research topics.
- Overall advice or comments to future participants in the program (今後の講師へのアドバイス):
Inform yourself on the level in Physics of high school students in Japan, but keep in mind they are only high school students. I was told Tsukukoma students are very good and teacher told me they have chosen to study physics so I tended to be a bit quick on the explanations for them not to get bored. I think it was a mistake as they might not have understood properly this part. In general, I try to ask them as many questions as possible as it is pretty unlikely that they will raise their hands to say they do not understand.
